

Coastal Resilience Principles

Coasts are adaptable, constantly changing systems at the interface of land and sea.

Natural and social communities are interconnected, in coastal areas and beyond.

We have the ability and responsibility to determine our future relationship with the coasts.